Non-Interest Income □ Fees earned from fee-based banking services □ Trust Department Fees ■ Mortgage Servicing Income □ Derivative Activities ☐ Gains from sales from assets like loans and securities Non-Interest Income (Cont'd) ☐ Games that banks play ■ Including in Non-Interest Income items that are not part of the normal course of business □ Gains on sales of securities □ Gains on sales of mortgages ■ When income in this area appears exceptional, check for consistency with prior periods on such figures Non-Interest Expenses ☐ Similar to expense section on a typical income statement □ Includes compensation, occupancy, outsourced services, telecommunications, amortization of goodwill, etc for day to day operations

Non-Interest Expenses (Cont'd)

- □ Pay particular attention to a host of expenses lumped together as "Other"
- ☐ Use SEC Form 10-Q to get a more detailed breakdown of these expenses

Assessing Growth

- ☐ Banks with moderate growth rates have ROE's in the mid-teens
- □ Rough estimate of long-term growth
 - = ROE x (1 Payout Ratio)
 - This calculation provides a growth rate that a company might be expected to achieve if it can reinvest its retained earnings at the same return it received on previous equity capital

Summary

- □ Banks are a "Spread Business"
- The Provision for Loan Loss is a key valuation measure to monitor if you own, or when purchasing a bank stock
- □ It is important to understand significant changes in Non-Interest Expense by using 10-Q and 10-K statements
- Evaluating growth rates of ROE and using ROE to estimate earnings growth are helpful measures in assessing a bank's future prospect for growth
