See reverse side for category definitions, agreement and further explanations.

All open orders are considered "good for 90 days" (starting with the order entry date and expiring at the close of the last trading day closest to the 90th calendar day, the time-in-force date). An open order will remain in effect until the time-in-force date unless the order is executed or cancelled. Customers may attempt to cancel open orders at any time prior to execution or prior to the time-in-force date.

Limits on open orders to buy and stop orders to sell, subject to the rules of the exchange or association where the securities are traded, may be automatically adjusted on the date the security trades "ex-dividend", "ex-rights", "ex-distribution" or "ex-interest".

Unexecuted portions of an open order which are executed on subsequent days are treated as separate orders for commission purposes, in accordance with industry practices.
